The content on this website is licensed under Creative Commons Attribution 3.0 License -Â .Q: Linq to sql field change I have a table in linq to sql with 2 columns (col1 and col2) I want to do this : first find all records with a specific col1 delete all rows where col2 == null update column "col1" with the value of "col2" How can I do this? A: Try this: context.Stuff.Where(r => r.Col1 == "value").Select(r=>{r.Col1 = r.Col2; return r;}); Replaces the value of Col1 when an object is selected from the DB. Cannot test now, will edit after. PS: No syntax errors or boxing on my side. EDIT: As Jon mentioned, try this instead: context.Stuff.Where(r => r.Col1 == "value").AsEnumerable().Select(r=>{r.Col1 = r.Col2; return r;}); This invention relates generally to information processing systems and more particularly to an interactive, method and apparatus which provide information to a user about possible "invisible" advantages in a system having a plurality of configuration options. Information is often spread throughout the Internet and other networks such as intranets. The Internet is a collection of interconnected computer networks that communicate using the Internet Protocol (IP), an addressing protocol that defines how messages are routed within the Internet. The Internet has a vast amount of information stored on dozens of computer systems. This information is largely useless to users who may be able to access a given site, yet be unable to understand the entire scope of that site's information. Although the Internet offers many benefits, it is difficult for Internet users to find information and navigate the large amounts of data available. Ulead Photoimpact X3 Keygen Free. Corel PhotoImpact X3 Crack, Keygen -.We expect quite a bit from the upcoming Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice, but we don't expect it to be as good as Captain America: The Winter Soldier. It certainly can't be (at least from what I can see) anywhere close to that movie and that's for good reason. It is actually expected to earn less than either of the previous two MCU movies. I think that's fair to expect considering how overhyped this movie was. Still, that's a big number. For all the jokes that are made, the number of people who actually see movies is dropping dramatically. Over the past 30 years, those numbers have been plummeting. As a result, the studios have been having to up their production values in order to make up for their collapsing ratings. That leads to more CGI, more special effects, etc. Well, I'm not happy with that because it has limits that are being reached. Actually, I'm starting to feel like we've used up all the special effects magic in the world. There's no more room to move in that regard. Now, we have to do things like Angelina Jolie's First Look at The Hulk. In other words, we have to draw in new audiences. We don't have the budget to do a showpiece production like the Civil War, but we can do something to introduce the characters to the audience. That doesn't necessarily work either, though. For instance, if we're not going to do a production that has a supernatural element, then we are forced to bring in a brand new audience. That means that everyone who's seen the previous movies are now potential fans, even if they don't like superheroes and don't have a clue why the film exists. That doesn't work for me. It's a Catch-22. We want to get more people to see superhero movies so that we don't have to make any more. At the same time, we
